Janis Nova Cat is rightly proud of her Arbalest, "Sanctum." A brand-new design to the Nova Cats within the Draconis Combine, none is available to the Spirit Cats in the Republic. In 3129, however, she won the right to travel to the Nova Cat capital of Irece in House Kurita, one of only a handful of Spirit Cats to do so in the past several decades, and there consulted with the Nova Cat Oathmaster. Upon seeing the first Arbalest walk off the assembly line, she immediately declared a Trial of Possession for it and claimed it as her spoils of victory.

Janis has already made good use of the machine. Though slow for a light 'Mech, it has a long range and significant firepower for such a light design. In late 3131, against an unknown enemy fielding several BattleMechs, the Arbalest's combination of range and firepower kept the enemy at bay until reinforcements could arrive.

William "Pyro" Peterson grew up in a street gang with an affinity for burning rival gangs' hangouts to the ground – preferably with the gang members trapped inside. Pyro moved up the food chain from gang to gang. When he had an opportunity to join Bannson's organization, he killed the two people that stood between him and Bannson's crusade without hesitation.

Peterson was assigned to The Band of Five, a veteran unit built on the brutality and ruthlessness of individual members rather than organizational or strategic skills. Pyro fit right in, and after some internal "negotiations" he became the pilot of a Firestarter BattleMech. The savagery of The Band of Five demands that each member become expert in his or her duties lest a rival kill them in order to rise through the ranks. So far, Pyro has excelled in a 'Mech that suits him perfectly, enabling him to defend his position.

Peterson has always gravitated toward larger, more powerful gangs; thus, if we ever need his services, we will need to present ourselves as such an organization. This will be difficult, however: he seems born to be one of Bannson's thugs.

William Peterson's Firestarter, which he dubbed "Sparks," is an example of one of the most specialized BattleMechs ever produced. The six flamers that give the 'Mech its name are devastating to unarmored infantry and a terror to pilots who run their 'Mechs hot.

In the battle for the world of Tikonov in 3074, this Firestarter proved a critical element. WoB forces launched an assault to secure the Earthwerks Ltd. BattleMech facility. The WoB forces breached the walls, and a lance of Firestarters set fire to that portion of the city. The White Volga River acted as a firebreak for the rest of the city and the plant, while the firestorm forced their withdrawal.

Though it was put out of action in that battle, the FS311-18W "Sparks" was repaired and put back into service by Jacob Bannson in late 3130 as part of his security force.

We lost track of him for a brief period, as did his family, but our intelligence indicates that within months of his disappearance, he found a job piloting a ConstructionMech and became quite accomplished with it. When Duke Sandoval formed the Prince's Men, Eryaman presented himself with no introduction and demanded an opportunity to prove his worth. Scant months later he was in command of a real BattleMech, living the adventure he'd always dreamed of. Eryaman is loyal to the Duke for giving him a chance, but he still wishes he had a way to mend the rift with his family. This longing for reconciliation is a potential chink in his armor.

Perhaps because his family has such a distinguished lineage going back centuries, upon receiving his assignment to pilot the Panther, Fetamet Eryaman became obsessed with finding out the lineage of 'Mech DC331-98A. Its recent history was easy enough to discover: when a MechWarrior of the Robinson Rangers deserted his post in the Federated Suns to follow Devlin Stone, he brought this 'Mech with him. However, upon digging further, Fetamet found that it had been taken from Chu-sa Suan Hap Do, a battalion commander in the Ninth Benjamin Regulars of House Kurita, during the conflict for Proserpina more than a half-century before. Furthermore, the Panther had been in that family for more than a century and a half. Pleased to be piloting a 'Mech with a lineage every bit as prestigious as his own, Fetamet named the Panther "Pride." As the Panther mounts one of the largest weapons on a light 'Mech, it has already lived up to its new name on the battlefield.

With a top speed of more than one hundred kilometers per hour and an impressive jump range, the Pack Hunter is an excellent flanking unit. With only energy weapons, it can range far afield for days on end without needing to resupply. These traits have kept this Pack Hunter out of the scrap yard, as it has been sent on many such missions for the secretive Order of the Five Pillars.

On its most recent mission, at the orders of Katana Tormark, Miguel V piloted the Pack Hunter – which he has named "Bane" – to a secret meeting that had been called to discuss the possibility of an alliance between the Dragon's Fury and the Spirit Cats. Leena's Hatchetman has been in the Highlanders since 3034. Nicknamed "Claymore" by its first pilot, it has served with distinction for almost a century. Its shining hour came on the world of Blue Hole in mid-3053. A strong raid by a Jade Falcon force was underway, and the Stirling's Fusiliers Highlander regiment was all that stood in their way. Though outmassed and outgunned, the Fusiliers rushed into close range and then quickly launched melee attacks. The Hatchetman, with its specially designed, depleted-uranium-edged blade, proved particularly devastating. As the Clans tend to avoid 'Mech physical combat at all costs, the Hatchetman dominated the field and soon turned the tide of battle, forcing the Falcons to abort their raid.

Because of Leena Cochrane's family history with the Highlanders, despite her initial disgrace she was given her choice of several 'Mechs. She did not hesitate in selecting "Claymore."

When Tara Campbell arrived and requested that the First Kearny join her crusade to hold together the crumbling Republic, he pledged his unit's loyalty to her cause – but apparently not to her. Following the success of Clan Diamond Shark's Mad Cat Mk II design – which took the venerable Mad Cat and increased its tonnage and lethality – Clan Ghost Bear attempted its own "new" conversion: the Ryoken II. It walked off the assembly lines in 3075 at the height of the WoB war.

A Ghost Bear MechWarrior who fought alongside House Kurita to take back the world of Dieron in 3077 originally piloted GB002-78G. Its profile tricked the defenders into believing it was a standard Ryoken, which quickly proved their undoing.

It was damaged badly enough in this conflict that it was abandoned on Dieron, where it was later picked up as salvage by the Second Kearny Highlanders as they moved through Dieron on a mop-up mission. Though it took several years to refurbish, it has since held a place of honor in the unit, and its most recent pilot, Caden Senn, has named it "Undod," or unity.

The Legionnaire was one of the last new designs to be mass-produced by the Achernar BattleMechs factory of the Federated Suns, before the plant was scaled back after the formation of the Republic. The FS736-04K played a pivotal role in the third battle of New Avalon, when WoB forces tried once again to destroy the head of House Davion. Along with three other Legionnaires, this 'Mech used its incredible speed to good effect to harass the attacking left flank as the enemy attempted to ford the Thames river and gain a foothold on the Isle of Avalon. The attacking force was so disorganized by their assault that a concerted counterattack broke their momentum, and the WoB were finally forced off-planet.

Surprisingly, the CC736-04K is not an upgrade of the advanced CPLT-C3 Catapult produced in the early 3050s. Instead, it is an upgrade of an original CPLT-C1 that came off the assembly line in 2571. Its glory days came when it accompanied the Star League army in the Liberation of Terra, but it stayed in the Inner Sphere rather than following the army into exile and became part of the famed mercenary unit the Eridani Light Horse. After almost half a millennium of service, it was finally brought down at the outbreak of the Word of Blake Jihad, as WoB forces drove the Eridani Light Horse from their posting on Dieron. In 3125, Jacob Bannson purchased it as part of a large lot of salvage and slowly upgraded it into a new variant. His success will likely prompt other such "upgrades."

Following the success of the Mad Cat II, Clan Diamond Shark developed the Mad Cat III, a medium-weight design to accompany the heavy Mad Cat and assault Mad Cat II. As the Diamond Sharks were selling both the Mad Cat II and Mad Cat III straight to the Inner Sphere Houses, providing the Clans' enemies with superior technology, the other Clans banded together to censure the renegade Clan. Many believe this was what pushed the Diamond Sharks to begin their final move to the Inner Sphere and revert to their original name of Sea Fox.

As it was sold to House Kurita, this Mad Cat III has only recently been piloted by a Clan MechWarrior. It was originally a part of Katana Tormark's forces, but a clash between the Steel Wolves and Dragon's Fury in early 3133 across the Prefecture borders of III and IV resulted in Kendrick Fetladral gaining a new 'Mech; he immediately named it "Lupus."

Kriya Wolf has only recently joined the Clan Wolf warrior caste. Originally a member of the Spirit Cats, she was captured and taken as a bondsman during a Wolf raid. As is usual among the Clans, she quickly shifted her loyalties and served her new Clan with the same fervor she had her old one. Her bondcord was quickly severed, and she became abtakha, fully adopted into the Clan Wolf warrior caste.

Through her exceptional prowess at the helm of her Tundra Wolf and several Trials of Position, she has been granted entry into the Wolfkin Keshik, the elite of the elite in the Steel Wolves. She is now desperate to earn a Bloodname, and the prestige and honor that come with it. This is our way to her, for she is so focused on acquiring a Bloodname that we can use her to our advantage if we can convince her that answering our needs would advance her quest.

Commentary:

The exceptionally well-designed Clan 'Mech called the Tundra Wolf was the first Clan Wolf 'Mech wholly designed and produced in the Inner Sphere. Though it went into production too late to have any real effect in the war against the Word of Blake, it quickly established a place for itself in the myriad Trials of Combat the Wolves launched against the Clans that share their border: Ghost Bear (now the Rasalhague Dominion), Hell's Horses and Jade Falcon.

This Tundra Wolf was part of the final reinforcements sent to the Wolves' Delta Galaxy as it fought to vanquish the WoB, but by the time the reinforcements arrived the war was effectively over. Nonetheless, its MechWarrior chose to follow the other remnants of Delta Galaxy into the Republic.

The Hasbani ancestral homestead was one of the planets that House Davion ceded to the Republic upon its formation, and the Hasbani became citizens of this new nation without their consent. There was much media attention when Devlin Stone personally requested the Hasbani family to decommission their Atlas as part of the Republic's demilitarization program. They refused and have lived as outsiders within the Republic ever since.

Our agents attempted to recruit them during this period, but with no success. Recently we have heard that Dereck Hasbani accepted Duke Sandoval's invitation to join the Davion Guards. This may prove to be the homecoming the Hasbani have been anticipating for sixty years.

Ordered into production by General of the Star League Army Aleksandr Kerensky, the Atlas is arguably one of the most renowned BattleMechs ever designed.

The DC392-59R Atlas has fought in some of the most famous battles in the history of House Davion. It was there when Davion forces finally pushed House Kurita forces back from its border at the end of the First Succession War. It was there on Mallory's World at the end of the Third Succession War to watch the death of First Prince Ian Davion at the hands of Combine troops. It was there when Clan Jade Falcon was ravaging Lyran worlds, and it was there at the climactic battle of New Avalon when Victor Steiner-Davion finally deposed his sister, the usurper Katherine Steiner-Davion.

Though it has received numerous upgrades over the years, at its heart, the Hasbani's "Avatar" remains a MechWarrior's ultimate 'Mech.

The Jupiter was designed as a companion to Clan Jade Falcon's premier assault 'Mech, the Turkina. Though the Jupiter is not as versatile as the Turkina, the scientist castemen who developed it built a rugged design out of the most common parts available, hoping it could thus be easily repaired in the field. This proved to be the case, and the Jupiter quickly became a favorite among Jade Falcon Second-Line Galaxies.

This Jupiter accompanied one of the few warriors of Clan Jade Falcon who followed Devlin Stone during the formation of the Republic. However, the pilot soon discovered that peace was not what she thought it would be and simply disappeared. The Knights of the Sphere were more than willing to take on the impressive machine she left behind.

It is currently piloted by Erin Johnston, who calls her 'Mech "Io," after one of Jupiter's moons.

Most men who have reached his age and stayed in the military have long since become brass, watching battles from behind the lines. He preferred to die on the field of battle, not sitting as a REMF in the command post while he ordered his men to die without him.

This attitude has stuck in the craw of every officer he has ever served under, but his phenomenal ability to insert and extract infantry units in any situation has forced them all to overlook his peculiar attitudes, and has fostered fanatical support among the infantry.

Valiant Vehicles built the VV1 Ranger Infantry Fighting Vehicle as a companion to the venerable Striker Light Tank. As the Striker Light Tank only mounts long-range and antivehicular weaponry, the Ranger was designed almost exclusively as an antipersonnel weapons platform. Slightly faster than the Striker, it mounts a staggering eight machine guns in a turret, with the four front-mounted small lasers almost an afterthought.

This particular design rolled off the assembly line in 3092 and was immediately assigned to one Corporal Cesar Spano. From that moment forward, the two have been inseparable. As he has been known to sleep in his vehicle, even when at a friendly base, numerous crude jokes about his "orientation" have surfaced; none are said to his face however. Nevertheless, Spano has nicknamed his machine "BK" for the fact that the Ranger has always watched his back.

Lisabet Wolf was originally Lisabet James, and until her thirteenth birthday she and her family lived on the world of Proserpina in Prefecture III. A farming family, they made do with what they had on the edges of the swamplands on the continent of Bragadin. The day she turned thirteen, she lost her father, mother and only sibling to blood limpets. Generally these semi-reptilian creatures only catch the unwary, but an unseasonably wet summer fostered an explosion in the native population, leading to her family's death.

With nothing left to keep her on the farm, she slowly made her way to the capitol, Conqueror's Pride, and managed to find enough work to pay for travel off-planet. Several years of wandering brought her to the world of Tikonov, where she was introduced to the Clan culture for the first time.

The Clan way offered a structure and society that appealed to her, and she immediately began to petition for acceptance into the Steel Wolves' Wolf Lancers. Because of her age and lack of training, she was ignored. However, after eighteen months of dogged determination, the unit's commander felt that her persistence was her strength and accepted her petition, giving her the training she needed to test out in the Wolf Lancers.

The Scimitar MkII Hover Combat Vehicle is an upgraded version of the venerable Scimitar Medium Hover Tank, which has been in the armies of the various House Lords for well over a hundred years. The MKII not only increased the vehicle's top speed, but by trading out the heavier autocannon of the original design, it was able to increase the number of weapons on the craft, as by the inclusion of five energy weapons—unusual on any vehicle.

WC437-33AB, like many of the vehicles in the Wolf Lancers, was scavenged from forgotten battlefields throughout the Republic; the Steel Wolves may accept the Inner Sphere warriors as having proven their worth, but that does not mean they will equip them with their superior Clan technology. The current pilot of the Scimitar, Lisabet Wolf, has named it "Blood Limpet," a disturbing homage to the animal that killed her family.

Members of the Band of Five are generally vicious, mean-spirited, and belong behind bars, but "Magpie" is a surely a special case. Our profile suggests that if not for the

The Fox Armored Car was designed as a forward observation vehicle that would have the armor to survive several enemy strikes, but would have the speed to quickly relocate or engage in a tactical withdrawal; its paired machine guns and medium laser simply keep the enemy ducking while it slips away. Though its extra-light engine drastically increases the vehicle's cost, its top speed of almost two hundred thirty kilometers an hour more than makes up for its steep price tag.

This particular design was made famous when Jacob Bannson himself wanted to survey a valley before an impending conflict, one of the first such conflicts to occur following the fall of the HPG net. A small detachment from the Amaterasu of the Dragon's Fury stumbled upon the vehicle, and a two-hour chase finally allowed the vehicle to elude its pursuers and escape. This led its current pilot, "Magpie" Webster, to name the vehicle "Dragon's Bane."

Mikel Nova Cat is one of a new generation of Spirit Cats that is not a Trueborn – born in an iron womb as part of the Clan's genetic breeding program – and is proud of it.

For generations, since the Clans first introduced their genetic-bred Trueborns, their Freeborn (naturally born) brethren have been second-class citizens, derided for not being 'pure.' Regardless of a Freeborn's capabilities, this has always held them back. However, with the Clans' invasion of the Inner Sphere and their close proximity to Sphere society and ideals over the last half century – especially for those Clan enclaves found in the Republic – the slow perversion of pure Clan culture was inevitable. Now, a new generation of Freeborn Spirit Cats has actually begun to gain some prominence and power, which horrifies their more traditional brethren.

What is more, like several others, Mikel Nova Cat is content to protect his Clan while piloting a vehicle. He does not hold with the past, where most Clansmen disdained vehicles as un-warrior-like, with 'Mechs the only worthy combat unit for a Clansman. Whether this attitude will further the cause of Freeborns or see him dead on the battlefield is unknown, but with his exceptional abilities, Mikel Nova Cat will be a force to be reckoned with.

For centuries the Clans generally disdained vehicles, considering BattleMechs the only true weapon for a warrior to take into battle. However, with the invasion of the Inner Sphere, the Clans found that combined-arms tactics (using infantry and vehicles alongside 'Mechs) were generally superior to their own type of combat. This led directly to several new Clan vehicle designs.

Following the success of the Shoden Assault Vehicle, Clan Nova Cat began to build a vehicle specifically designed to attack and destroy other vehicles. It mounts one of the most powerful weapons on the battlefield, which it can quickly bring to bear with its impressive speed.

NC339-18QX has one of the highest kill ratios of any vehicle fielded by any faction currently involved in conflicts. In a recent battle on the world Ozawa, this vehicle was responsible for dispatching five vehicles in as many minutes. As such, Mikel Nova Cat has named the vehicle "Soulreaver."

This particular Condor first saw action against the Word of Blake. Within a year of the launch of the WoB Jihad, the Northwind Highlanders came under siege on their home world, Northwind. An entire company of these vehicles was used to harass the enemy advancing toward the capitol of Tara, which kept them off guard long enough for reinforcements to arrive and force them off-world. Daneel Wolf and the few others that pilot vehicles in the Wolfkin Keshik are a minority unappreciated by some of their Keshik mates. Though the Clan invasion of the Inner Sphere in the 3050s showed how powerful combined-arms combat could be – fielding BattleMechs alongside vehicles, infantry and aerospace assets – many in the Wolfkin Keshik are traditional enough to remember the days when a Clansman of any salt would pilot only a 'Mech. It also helps that his combat ability on the field outshines even some of the MechWarriors'. The JES Tactical Missile Carrier is Joint Equipment Systems' attempt to recapture this specialty market. Having produced the original SRM/LRM Carriers, in 3053 they lost the bid to produce upgraded versions of these venerable support vehicles. Shortly before the end of the Word of Blake Jihad, JES unveiled a new generation of missile carriers. However, the design's slow speed and relative lack of armor, combined with the end of the war, almost doomed the craft to extinction. Only orders from Periphery realms such as the Taurian Concordat, the Magistracy of Canopus, and the Marian Hegemony kept the design alive.

The particular design has fought on numerous battlefields across some six hundred light years, from the Periphery into the Republic. Having been taken in a Trial of Possession by its current pilot, Daneel Wolf loves the vehicle for its all-or-nothing design – massive firepower with almost no fall-back defense. He has named it "Blackwolf."

Stocky, with huge hairy arms, a neck that would better suit a tree trunk and legs so thick he's slightly bow-legged, Denner's lance mates have nicknamed him 'Juggernaut.' His unusual thickness of body comes from being born on the world of Cylene II, where the planet's 1.26 gravities tend to make its citizens stockier and more powerful. He himself jokes that he originally wanted to become a MechWarrior, but he felt that not even the one-hundred ton Atlas would support his weight; only the sturdiness of a vehicle would provide him the support he needs.

The original Demon was an ancient design, first introduced in 2716 for use with the Star League Defense Force. The current design, contracted by the Republic, was designated with the same name in an effort to instill its pilots with a sense of history and esprit de corps.

However, the modern design has very little to do with the original. Weighing fifteen tons less, with almost twice its speed and lacking the powerful Gauss rifle of its predecessor, the current Demon is more at home in the confines of a city, dealing with infantry and battle armor, than taking on 'Mechs on an open battlefield.

This vehicle more than demonstrated this propensity in the recent conflict in the capitol city of Saint Randall on the world Addicks. There, the Demon's speed and wheeled design completely out-manuevered the defending units, contributing to their eventual withdrawal. The current pilot, Alec Denner, has nicknamed the tank "Angel."

Gunsho Jun'ko Oshiro has courted danger almost from the moment she joined The Brotherhood of the Dragon's Fury. A superb vehicle commander and a brilliant tactician, she has proved her worth many times over in recent engagements. She is, however, extremely dissatisfied with being stuck in a green, hodgepodge unit like The Brotherhood. Though devoted to House Kurita and loyal to Katana Tormark, she wants a promotion that she feels will bring her the honor she deserves.

She has no interest in joining our organization – she would not meet our criteria in any case – and Tormark has already decided that Jun'ko's impatience and hot-headedness make her too volatile to be promoted to the Amaterasu. It is this judgment that has angered her (bearing out Tormark's perception) and caused her to protest directly to Katana on several occasions.

Regardless of Oshiro's battlefield expertise or her value to The Brotherhood and the Dragon's Fury as a whole, it is not in Katana's nature to accept such behavior from her troops. Though this is a perfect opportunity to foment discord among the Dragon's Fury if we find it necessary, this agent does not believe Jun'ko Oshiro will survive long enough to be of any use to us.

The M1 Marksman Tank, like the Demon Medium Tank, was contracted by the Republic and designated as such to tie in with the original Marksman, first produced in 2702 for the original Star League. However, unlike the Demon, which many pilots consider to be an inferior design, the M1 is a massively more powerful one. Though the original Marksman actually mounted an artillery weapon, the current design is a more traditional tank. However, at thirty tons heavier than the original, it has an arsenal of weaponry that few other modern tanks can match.

DC606-37TD was first used in combat when a rogue Warrior House from the Capellan Confederation, apparently feeling dishonored at the loss of their Chancellor's ancestral home world Liao to the Republic, attempted to recapture the planet. The devastating firepower of the M1 provided the bulwark against which this Warrior House died. Jun'ko Oshiro has named this vehicle "Bakemono," or monster.

In a rare instance when a non-company DropShip grounded for several weeks to make emergency repairs, he bribed his way on board and off planet.

Once off world, Riordan traveled from planet to planet drinking in the wonders of the universe. He even made it out into House Davion territory, where he came to appreciate the Federated Suns' value system and customs before making his way back to the Republic. When The Prince's Men were formed, his skills along with his honest belief in the ideals of House Davion made him a valuable asset to the Swordsworn. Though he may not be the most elite vehicle pilot, he has a tactical sense learned through years of simple survival. Our profilers tell us that wandering has made him a homebody now, and though his value as a warrior is clear, his loyalty to the Swordsworn makes him an unlikely candidate for recruitment.

With an impressive portfolio of tracked military vehicles to its name – such as the Rommel, Patton, and Demolisher II – Defiance Industries drafted plans for a new wheeled assault tank. The design was designated the DI Schmitt Tank, in honor of Colonel Hanni Schmitt, the last commander of the Royal Black Watch Regiment—the personal regiment of the First Lord of the Star League.

This particular design first fought on the battlefields of the Federated Suns against a raid from their bitter historic rivals, the Capellan Confederation, on the world Lee. Though it debuted admirably, it was simply outnumbered and its crew was killed, though the tank survived relatively intact. Nevertheless, it was sold, along with a large shipment of scrap metal, to Duke Sandoval in the Republic, where it was fully repaired and put back into action. It's nicknamed "Phoenix" by its current pilot, Leo Riordan.

Dmitri couldn't care less. As quickly as he could leave his parents and what he calls "their interminable, worthless chatter," he did so, booking passage into Prefecture III. There, he found a cause – and more importantly one that he believes might actually succeed in his lifetime – that of Katana Tormark and her Dragon's Fury. His parents' "endless chatter" did do one thing for him: it primed him to crave a mission, suiting him perfectly for The Brotherhood.

Though green and still learning the ropes, it appears that the now-disinherited Sorkin will make a fine vehicle pilot. He's young enough that, presented with a more attractive cause – ours – he could be turned and molded to our purposes.

DC229-36RJ was originally fielded in the Free Worlds League and fought on the world Regulus as two claimants for the House Marik throne clashed. In short, his very ordinariness makes him stand out. No one is that ordinary.

Though we have spent quite some time digging through his past, there is nothing to indicate he is anything more than what he appears to be. Both agents assigned to the case agree, however, that something does not feel right. Both suspect he is a plant and a spy – a spy for whom, however, is anyone's guess. All of the Great Houses have the ability to place an agent wherever they prefer. Though the Republic would like us to believe they do not engage in such activities, we know otherwise; he might be theirs. It is doubtful any of the other Clans would care enough to be involved in such an activity. The other possibility, though remote, is that he is a plant from Kev Rosse himself. The Senator has shown that he has supreme confidence in his Spirit Cats, but it would not be the first time a leader's actions behind the curtain did not match his public face.

Dekker bears further observation.

The Behemoth II Heavy Tank is an upgrade of the original Behemoth Heavy Tank. Though the Behemoth was only a century and a half old when plans for the Behemoth II were begun – many other vehicle designs have seen service for several centuries without major modification – Aldis Industries nevertheless made the decision to fully upgrade one of their most successful designs.

However, though the original Behemoth proved a very successful design, the relative peace of the early 3100s across the Inner Sphere led to almost no orders. Desperate to find a way to generate sales of a vehicle that had been very costly to develop, Aldis Industries began to gift the design to any takers; considering that, after observing its performance in the first few months of conflict, those orders should come in abundance.

This particular Behemoth II was literally the first vehicle off the assembly line and was taken by Dekker Nova Cat of the Spirit Cats, who named it "Titan."

As far as our agents can determine, Hitoshi Sato is completely unique and arguably one of the most important assets at our disposal. The fact that the Republic or a Great House has not kidnapped him is a testament to his skills and the growing power of the Dragon's Fury.

In late 3126 Hitoshi was taken as bondsman by Clan Sea Fox. Proving his worth in the following years, he went through the traditional Clan adoption, abtakha, and became a Fox warrior. In 3129, he was instrumental in the successful Trial of Possession for two new DropShips from the world of Ankaa. As a 'reward' for his brilliant battlefield tactics and at his own request, he is the only known non-Clansman born individual to survive the implantation of the Clans' Enhanced Imaging device. In 3031, Hitoshi was taken by a unit then commanded by Prefect Katana Tormark; he has since stayed there.

Though the fiber-optic wires that appear as luminous lines under the skin across his body make most Spheroids uneasy, it gives him an unmatched connection with a BattleMech. Additionally it is also a technology that the Inner Sphere has yet to replicate, something the Order should be able to use to its advantage.

However, in the hands of Hitoshi Sato and his Clan Enhanced Imaging implants, the Pack Hunter — which he calls the "Dragonhound" — comes alive as for almost no other MechWarrior. Able to tie directly into the enhanced-imaging display system of the Pack Hunter, Hitoshi's quickness and combat marksmanship have made this BattleMech a feared sight on any battlefield. Its significant firepower and long range more than make up for its speed, relatively slow for a 'Mech its size. He's named it "Fister."
Though he is not about to ask any questions – you don't ask questions in The Scourge, and he's not about to lose his ride due to an "oversight" – he has to wonder where the design came from. Her first known use of a dagger was at age twelve, when a drunk felt he could have his way with a small child; the belly slashes taught him otherwise. Her aptitude with daggers quickly led to her nickname.

When the call to form Wyld's Jokers went out, Jones had already made her way into Prefecture IV and quickly fit into the hodgepodge unit. Though her general attitude had always been one of complete disdain for the opposite sex, she had a tempestuous relationship with Jack Farrell almost immediately upon entering the unit; we believe that one of their more infamous fights led directly to Jack's current nickname of "One-Eyed." Her only other known connection is the "Maggie" Webster; some speculate they are sisters, but this is doubtful.

With her affection for all things sharp, when "Dagger Di" Jones saw the Hatchetman BattleMech for the first time, it was simply love at first sight. The previous occupant of the 'Mech was interested in keeping his ride, but she quickly disabused him of the notion of ownership, along with a lot of blood and some skin.

A well-rounded medium 'Mech, the Hatchetman has been a strong design since it was first introduced in 3023. With its depleted-uranium-edged hatchet blade – which she has already proven can shear 'Mech heads off like a hot knife through butter – she simply can't imagine piloting any other type of 'Mech and has no plans to; if her "Dagger" dies, so does she.

for some MechWarriors. Flamers often require pilots to apply a simple point-and-shoot technique; the splash effect of the weapon will usually do some damage in the general direction of the target.

However, Rikkard is not satisfied with such sloppy marksmanship. With a skill that has been honed across many years and numerous Trials, he has almost perfected the use of the weapon, able to strike targets more often and with greater accuracy than many other MechWarriors employing more easily targeted weapons. Such dedication to duty will be difficult to tamper with, but if he can be turned, will be a perfect match for the Order.

One of the most specially designed BattleMechs ever fielded, the Firestarter gains its name from the six flamers that it mounts on twin arms. Though powerful against any target, they are especially devastating to unarmored infantry.

Though it walked off the assembly lines before the fall of the Star League, and so could have left with the SLDF that was destined to become the Clans, it did not. Instead, it was piloted by a succession of warriors in the Inner Sphere and was not taken into Clan Nova Cat until 3059, when Combine troops clashed with the Cats on the world of Avon. Though the Kurita MechWarrior of this Firestarter was killed in action, his prowess was such that one young Clan warrior stepped forward to honor his memory by piloting the machine.

For its unusual but powerful history, Rikkard Nova Cat named it "Soulbearer."

Abeda Measho fled the Draconis Combine when he was twenty years of age. He had just been accepted to the prestigious Sun Zhang MechWarrior Academy when his father, a prominent businessman on Buckminster, was disgraced when his duplicity in working with members of the criminal yakuza came to light. To further scar Abeda, his father did not clean his family's honor and name through the ritual of seppuku. Knowing he could never redeem himself in the eyes of his homeland – and more importantly in the eyes of his fellow MechWarriors and the Internal Security Force – for the sins of his father, he fled to the Republic of the Sphere hoping for a new start.

Though he attempted to forget his past, Abeda's lifelong dedication to becoming a MechWarrior finally pushed him toward the military life he'd fled. Furthermore, the indoctrination of the Sun Zhang Academy was sufficient to drive him to enlist with the Dragon's Fury; the closest he will likely ever come to marching to the Dragon's banner. That indoctrination and passionate dedication can be used by the Order when the need arises.

Abeda Measho feels unworthy of the 'Mech that Katana Tormark herself "loaned" to him, for this particular Panther is none other than "Katana Kat," piloted by Minobu Tetsuhara in the 3020s. Minobu, arguably one of the greatest examples of all that makes the samurai of House Kurita great, kept the traitorous Wolf's Dragoons from destroying the Combine. In the end, their treachery led him to a place where he could not ignore his own honor, and he took his own life in the ritual of seppuku. The "Katana Kat" continued down through the family line and was serving in the Ninth Sword of Light regiment when the unit joined The Republic.

Now it's in the care of Katana Tormark, a direct descendent of Minobu through her mother's side; she pilots a larger 'Mech in battle. Nevertheless, she sees past Abeda's dishonor to the superlative and honorable pilot he is, and has shown her trust with this 'Mech.

Nothing and no one could stand in the way of Santiago becoming a MechWarrior. For generations, the Padillas have served as MechWarriors; their line can be traced all the way back to the original Star League and perhaps even beyond.

Though his ancestor originally served with the Star League Defense Force, she felt it was wrong to abandon the Inner Sphere, so when eighty percent of the SLDF followed General Aleksandr Kerensky into the self-imposed exile of the Exodus she stayed behind. Like many of her comrades that stayed, she did not become a part of a House military but instead chose to go freelance, offering her services to the highest bidder. As Santiago's ancestors actually became mercenaries among mercenaries, moving from merc to merc down through the decades – most attached themselves to a unit for life – it is a testament to their courage and skill that their bloodline survived for centuries.

With such a lineage, there was no doubt that Santiago would follow the only path open to him as a MechWarrior. Though not a real mercenary unit, the Ghost Legion's mercenary roots in the Vanguard Legion make it is no surprise that Santiago chose to join them.

FS748-24Y was first used in action in 2900 by the famed mercenary unit the Eridani Light Horse, as it assaulted the Combine-held world of Radalah. From that moment forth, though it changed hands numerous times, it was a mercenary 'Mech. Passing through the hands of such famed merc units as the Blue Star Irregulars and the Kell Hounds, to the dregs, like the Waco Rangers and Wilson's Hussars, this Firestarter has seen every type of lucrewarrior outfit in existence.

Strangely enough, it came into the hands of the Vanguard Legion not through its usual form of combat, but through a hand of cards. The commander, Colonel Chad Dean, beat the commander of Harlock's Warriors (Samantha Viele) in a poker game in 3061 that resulted in the change of ownership.

With its six flamers, which can be devastating to unarmored infantry, Santiago Padilla has named it "Matchstick."

An up-and-coming star in the Northwind Fusiliers, Tara Bishop has a strange heritage, one that should have barred her from ever becoming a member of the Northwind Highlanders military.

In late 3057, after thirty years of impeccable service, the mercenary Northwind Highlanders were put into an untenable situation that forced them to fight their previous employer. Though the Third Royal Guards RCT inflicted substantial damage, the Highlanders managed to finally force them off world and, for a time, gained their independence. A Guard MechWarrior by the name of Isaac Bishop was taken hostage during the fighting and was never repatriated back to the Guards before they lifted off planet. He fell in love with the world he had tried to conquer, and through years of work slowly became a part of the Northwind culture, even being allowed to marry.

Now, some seventy years later, Tara Bishop, a direct descendent of Isaac, has once again donned the neurohelmet that Isaac and his descendents had to forgo to become a part of Northwind. Though some still look at her as though her Guard blood will betray her at any minute, her mastery of tactics has assured her a place in the Fusiliers.

The Pack Hunter that Tara Bishop has named "Redemption" has almost as storied a history as she does. Walking off the Clan Wolf (in-Exile) assembly lines in 3065, it first saw action in Alpha Galaxy in the massive battle on Tharkad during the final days of the FedCom Civil War. The next great battle, that almost saw its death, was in the task force that attempted to break the back of the Word of Blake's siege of Outreach during the Jihad. From that point until well after the formation of the Republic, the Pack Hunter lay mostly destroyed on the fields of Outreach. Only as the cleanup began was the Pack Hunter taken by Republic forces and given a new lease on life.

Now, in the Highlanders, Tara is appreciative of the design's incredible top-end speed of over a hundred kilometers an hour, as well as its impressive jump range.

Unlike most members of the Amaterasu, who can trace MechWarrior heritages back centuries, Danni Haag's ancestor first became a MechWarrior during the Clan invasion of the 3050s. A citizen of the Free Rasalhague Republic, her ancestor was horrified when Clan Wolf, along with Clan Ghost Bear, nearly swallowed her beloved State that only 15 years earlier had gained its independence from the Draconis Combine.

As the years passed, Clan Ghost Bear slowly began to seduce the population of the Free Rasalhague Republic into believing that the best course for freedom and protection lay in joining them. Danni's own ancestors wholly supported the union of the Free Rasalhague Republic and the Ghost Bear Dominion, which eventually led to the formation of the Rasalhague Dominion.

However, from her earliest years, Danni was horrified that her people had sold their souls for supposed protection, and joined the small but vocal minority that still seeks to overthrow the Ghost Bears and gain true independence. Forced to leave the Dominion because of her beliefs, she came to know and admire Katana Tormark, who promised to aid her in the future if she would pledge her loyalty and service to Katana now. She has quickly become one of Katana's most capable and ardent supporters.

The Arbalest currently piloted by Danni Haag was actually a gift from the Nova Cats in the Combine to Katana Tormark. This is not only unusual, as the Clans are not known for gifting anything much less a BattleMech, but the fact that Khan Jacali Nostra is even aware of Katana's existence says volumes about Katana's growing power and influence; an influence not only felt in the Republic, but felt in the Combine as well. Why Khan Nostra felt the need to provide a gift is anyone's guess, but it cannot bode well.

As is her usual wont, Katana took said gift and transferred it to Danni Haag, sealing Danni firmly to herself. With its long-range, and significant firepower for a machine its size, Danni has named it "Hellwasp."

Sadia Wolf is a passionate supporter of Anastasia Kerensky, leader of the Crusaders, and believes that the Clan Wolf population residing in the Republic sold its heart for safety. She is also almost wholly clinically insane.

Sadia is one of the youngest to ever undergo the implantation of the Clan's Enhanced Imaging; only the most rabid Crusaders undergo this dangerous surgery. The EI neural implants consist of an extensive series of electronic sensors, contact points and fiber-optic wires implanted just below the recipient's skin and attached to the central nervous system. The EI acts as a wireless neurohelmet and enables the warrior to instantly communicate with the BattleMech, drastically increasing reaction speed. However, though the EI provides a level of battle capability unmatched by any other known system, it has serious side effects; every known individual with the implants goes insane with in a few short years – Sadia underwent the procedure four years ago.

Nevertheless, like a rabid wolf, though her insanity has impaired her, her reins are firmly held by Anastasia, who unleashes this most dangerous individual on any who would cross her.

Commentary:

That Sadia Wolf chose to have an Inner Sphere 'Mech wired to allow her Enhanced Imaging implants to fully interface with the machine – which she calls "Teddyslayer" – surely must be a testament to her insanity. Furthermore, that Anastasia Kerensky backed the plan is simply further proof of how valuable Sadia is to Anastasia's plans.

As for this Catapult, it is a relatively new design, having come into service in late 3037 and saw its first action in the War of 3039 when the Federated Commonwealth attacked the Draconis Combine in an effort to defeat their centuries long foe. It then saw action against the Jade Falcon Clan as well as fighting for both the Steiner and Davion sides during the FedCom Civil War. Surprisingly, it does not appear to have fought at all during the Word of Blake Jihad, but was in the hands of the Clan Wolf forces

Due to his piloting expertise and apparent lack of fear in the face of danger, he came to the personal

Since that time he has been given numerous assignments, all of which he has fulfilled in an exemplary fashion.

It has come to the Order's attention, however, that some of his missions have involved secret elements, not in keeping with the normally open – some would even say naïve – philosophy of the Knights. What this might mean is unclear. Dunne bears watching.

They became fast friends, often admitting themselves to be closer than brothers, Lee always one-half step behind Ben. When final graduation came, however, Ben passed his MechWarrior tests; Lee did not. As is usual in such situations, Lee blames Ben for his failure and has held a grudge ever since.

Ben followed the path less trodden when he left the Republic military to sign up with the Prince's Men. His strange style of leadership found a perfect fit with this rag-tag band of misfits, and he quickly made captain.

New, Panther DC010-73C walked off the assembly lines in 3081, the same year that the Republic of the Sphere was formed under the guidance of Devlin Stone. However, this Panther's short history is quite colorful.

It saw action against Clan Ghost Bear (soon to be the Rasalhague Dominion) in 3084. Then, as even the Combine's military was forced into cutbacks and "peace" broke out everywhere, it found its way to the Periphery, where it saw action against numerous pirate bands, including Vance Rezak and the Tortuga Fusiliers. Finally, it saw action against Clan Snow Raven at the beginning of the new century on the border with the Outworlds Alliance.

From that point it was cycled back through the interior of the Combine and traveled to Katana Tormark; why it was sent has not yet been determined. It was quickly taken in a skirmish by the Swordsworn and is currently piloted by Ben Gerringer, who has named it "Torch."

Despite our intelligence efforts, we have not yet determined how an unsavory individual such as Jack Farrell came to possess an assault BattleMech, much less a brand-new design of the Jupiter class. The Order does know that he was born on the world of Sarna in the Capellan Confederation. He ran away from home when he was only 14, stowing away on a cargo DropShip. From there he ranged far and wide, from the Federated Suns to the Capellan Confederation and the Lyran Commonwealth, working initially as a simple cargo handler but slowly making his way up the food chain. Between 3127 and 3131

he simply vanished, and when he reappeared within The Republic, already a member of Wyld's Jokers, he was piloting an assault-class Clan BattleMech. Record No

Since his return, it is believed he lost his left eye in a fight with his supposed lover, "Dagger Di" Jones. This apparently has not impaired his battlefield performance; it has, however, increased his ferocity in combat.

DA-142-02  Though not as versatile as the Turkina, Clan Jade Falcon's premier assault 'Mech, the Jupiter is still a rugged design that is an excellent companion to the superior machine. With common parts, it is readily repaired in the field, giving it a longevity that most other designs cannot match.

How this particular design came into the hands of "One-Eyed" Jack Farrell is anyone's guess. It is almost a crime to see such a fine BattleMech in the hands of a person most people consider a common criminal. Nevertheless, his "Godfist" is more than a match for most opponents—they don't survive calling him "common" for very long.

Jonah Levin grew up on the world of Hesperus II, where his uncle owned a parts manufacturer that supplied the on-world 'Mech factory, Defiance Industries. At his uncle's knee he learned business and an admiration for 'Mechs that led to military school.

Nevertheless, his life has been beset by bad and good luck. When bad luck hits, it's usually disastrous, but somehow he's throne clear or benefits from it. Such an incident was the battle for Kurragin in 3110 when his unit was slaughtered to a man around him, yet he managed to survive. His courage, and more importantly his desire to want to help the families of those who died on Kurragin, brought him to Devlin Stone's attention and he was offered the chance to become a Knight of the Sphere.

Through tireless and selfless work over many years, Devlin Stone chose Levin to enter his inner circle, becoming one of the eighteen Paladins of the Exarch's council, where he continues to serve with devotion.

Commentary:

Unlike so many Atlases that walk today's battlefields with a history centuries long – such as the "Avatar" piloted by Dereck Hasbani of the Swordsworn – this Atlas is less than a year old. Nevertheless, it still has the entire, storied history of its make behind it, providing it with a proxy past that other warriors respect...and fear.

Ordered into production by General of the Star League Army Aleksandr Kerensky himself, the Atlas was to be the ultimate 'Mech, capable of striking terror into opponents with its fearsome head design before a single weapon was ever discharged.

Having only recently walked off the assembly line, this Atlas was purchased by the Republic for the Knights of the Sphere. Currently it is piloted by Jonah Levin who, strangely enough, named it "Solitude."

Diane Jameson is an unusual MechWarrior, as her first love and desire was to be an aerospace pilot. Accepted into the prestigious Lloyd Marik-Stanley Aerospace School in the Marik Commonwealth, she excelled, and by her third year was at the top of her class.

Though she tried to remain neutral, during her third year the entire school divided along political lines as students chose sides in the conflict between the three heirs to the House Marik throne: Anson Marik, Jessica Marik and Fontaine Marik. With the collapse of the Free Worlds League following the Word of Blake

Jihad, numerous battles had been fought in the subsequent sixty years to reunite the Free World League under many Marik heirs – all to no avail. The current contenders caused the school to divide itself and combat actually occurred before one side gained ascendancy. Though her House has clashed with itself more than any other Great House, Diane was still horrified to see her best friends and classmates kill each other. She fled to the Republic.

There, though her military mindset was too ingrained for her to not enlist, her terrible memories kept her from an aerospace fighter. Instead, she zealously threw herself into becoming a top-rate MechWarrior, in a faction that had nothing to do with her broken yesterdays.

A Clan Ghost Bear design first introduced in 3075, it was an attempt to achieve the same success that Clan Diamond Shark had with its Mad Cat II design, which increased the tonnage and lethality of the original Mad Cat. The Ryoken II increased the tonnage from a medium to a heavy 'Mech, which resulted in a strong design.

Ryoken II GB337-49G was the first design sold directly to the Republic of the Sphere, not simply acquired through a Trial of Possession, which caused a stir among Clans Jade Falcon, Hell's Horses, and Wolf. Several actual Trials of Grievance from Clan Hell's Horses were declared and fought against the Ghost Bears.

Having served in the Republic military, it was "taken" for use by Duke Sandoval and is currently piloted by Diane Jameson. She has named it "Olympia."
